String Quartet No. 3

Op. 7

I. Visione

II. Riflesso

III. Scintille

IV. Dal silenzio, luce

Performance Notes

The String Quartet No. 3, Op. 7, is cast in four movements of concentrated character. Each movement reflects a facet of a single idea — vision, reflection, spark, light — and the whole arc moves from private interior to shared revelation.

I. Visione — Allegro moderato

28 bars in C major. The movement opens unaccompanied in the first violin and gathers gradually. Observe the hairpin dynamics strictly; the breathing between phrases is part of the architecture.

II. Riflesso — Andante sospeso

29 bars in G major. A quiet mirror of Visione, with the melodic material inverted and rhythmically expanded. Keep the pulse supple and the bow weight even throughout.

III. Scintille — Vivace

73 bars in D major, 2/4. The parallel-octave clusters at bars 15–20, 37–40, and 110–123 are intentional and should be voiced boldly; they are the sparks the movement names.

IV. Dal silenzio, luce — Lento assai

77 bars, moving from D minor to D major. The silence between gestures carries weight equal to the notes. Resist the temptation to connect; let the air do its work.

About the Composer

Andrew Trotter (b. 2008) is an American composer whose music draws on the Classical and Romantic traditions while reaching toward a contemporary voice shaped by cinema, hymnody, and the chamber repertoire.

His catalog spans orchestral, chamber, and solo piano works, including Symphony No. 1 Messiah (Op. 3), Tempesta dell'Anima (Op. 2), the ballet The Silver Swan (Op. 6), and the Ricordi collection for solo piano (2026). The present String Quartet is his third in the form.

Trotter studies piano performance at Kennesaw State University. His music has reached listeners on Spotify and YouTube, and his cinematic chamber work Intermezzo (The Eye) from Tempesta dell'Anima has been placed through The Playlist Agency.
